Private Crime Prevention Practitioner Training

Governor Mark R. Warner announced the Private Crime Prevention Practitioner (PCPP) certification program in October 2003. The PCPP program trains and certifies professionals in the private security industry (security, investigations, electronic security) in crime prevention and homeland security. The PCPP program is modeled after the successful DCJS Crime Prevention Specialist program for law enforcement officers.

The Department of Criminal Justice Services will administer and operate the program. Certification will be awarded based on successful completion of 48 hours of crime prevention and instructor training; a national fingerprint-based criminal history records check and at least one year of experience in the private security field.

To support the new Private Crime Prevention Practitioner Certification, the Virginia Crime Prevention Association (VCPA) provides a twenty-four hour (24) Basic Crime Prevention training course and other crime prevention training courses throughout the state. The VCPA crime prevention trainers are current or former law enforcement officers and crime prevention specialists who have an average of twenty years experience in developing and delivering crime prevention services. In addition to scheduled training courses, the VCPA is available to contract directly with businesses and organizations to provide crime prevention training for security staff.

The Basic Crime Prevention course includes the following topics.

- Introduction to Crime Prevention
- Crime Prevention and Homeland Security
- Security Hardware and Technology
- Security Lighting
- Personal Safety
- Business Crime Prevention Principles
- Violence in the Workplace
- Conducting Security Assessments
- Critical Incident Response and Management
- Evacuation Planning

The fee to participate in VCPA training is $75 per training day for individuals registering for training courses that will qualify them for certification as a Private Crime Prevention Practitioner (PCPP).
